

APRU Programs and UN Sustainable Development Goals SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

This matrix is relevant to working sessions on APRU programs, strategic plan, and the UN SDGs. It provides an overview of the programs, identifies the UN SDGs addressed, highlights student activities, describes who is engaged, and raises considerations in relation to policy and student leadership.

(APWiL)

Co-Chairs:

Prof. Joanna Regulska, Vice Provost and Associate Chancellor of Global Affairs, UC Davis

Dr. Sabrina Lin, Vice-President for Institutional Advancement, The Hong Kong University of Science and Technology

The overall Program objective is to advance gender equity and ultimately increase number of women in leadership roles across Universities in the region.

Digital Economy

The Digital Economy program Host: focus is on large scale projects currently developed in partnership with UNESCAP and funded by Google.

These projects reflect APRU's commitment to shape the regional conversation on the future of the digital economy and provide the evidentiary base for policy-making.

University of Southern California

Program Director:

Dr. Mellissa Withers, USC Institute for Global Health

By facilitating collaboration and enhancing regional dialogue, the APRU Global Health Program bridges health divides, promotes and protects population health, and meets shared health challenges.

Host:

Tohoku University

Program Director:

Dr. Takako Izumi, International Research Institute of Disaster Science (IRIDeS)

The program provides the platform to share best practice, knowledge, and research, to better understand risks and minimize the threat to human life.

Pacific Ocean

The program was developed in response to SDG14 and the UN's call for voluntary commitments.

Population Aging

Host:

Keio University

Program Director:

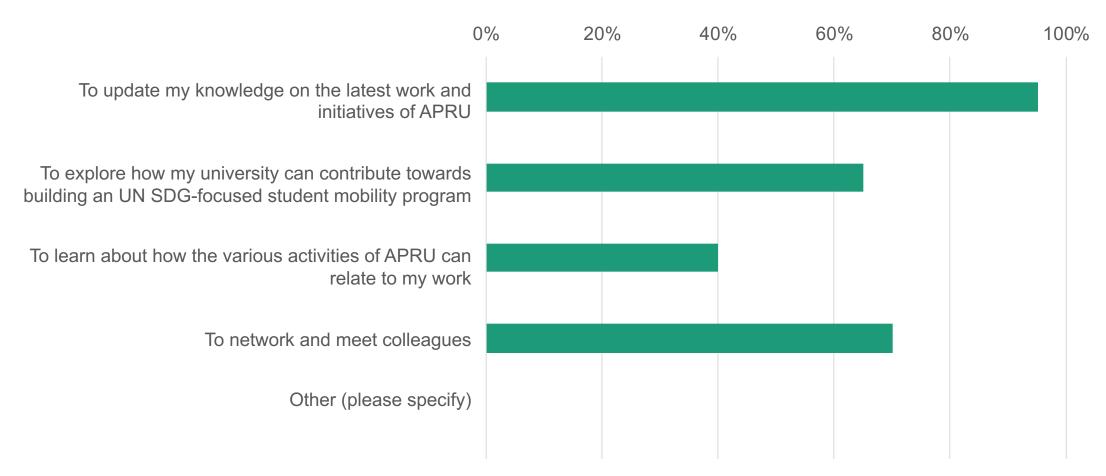

Prof. Hiroki Nakatani, Keio University

The Program brings together renowned experts on population aging from across the Asia-Pacific. It provides a platform to engage with government and enterprise, and to support capacity building to improve the capacity of nations to deal with this aging challenge.
